Then the Hospitality Industry may be a great career for you!

The hospitality industry provides several excellent opportunities for advancement.

The Washington Hospitality Foundation in partnership with the University of the District of Columbia has designed an industry recognized certification program to prepare District residents for exciting careers in hospitality.

The training program will consist of three parts: orientation, training classes, and career counseling. Participation in all three portions of the program is mandatory, and attendance is compulsory.

Throughout the program, residents will receive exposure to the hospitality industry through shadowing, guest speakers, and hotel visits. All participants will earn industry recognized certificates, as Master Rooms Division Specialists, upon completing four 90 day externships at nearby limited and full service hotels. In addition to the hospitality training sessions, residents will also have the opportunity to participate in resume writing seminars and interview skills workshops.

If you are a District resident over the age of 18 and are interested in an entry-level position in the hotel industry, consider participating in our program. Training classes take place in the evening and are absolutely free. Take the first step in your exciting new hospitality career today!
